" The White Man's Party."

It can not be too distinctly understood at the North that what is just now known as the "white man's verty" by the Southern whites at all, but by the Northern Radicals. Not only contaon fairness and justice to the South, but the best interests of the whole country require that there should be no belonging of the Northern mind on this point. We are no longer at war with the Southern States, nor is there may longer danger of their being built up with European help inin a great power, threatening the Northern and the Western people. They are once noise an integral part of our common country. We can no more afford to make serious pil-takes lu our dealing with them than England can to make inf-taken in her dealings with Inland, or Austria in her dealing with Hungary. When the civil war ended in 1865 it left the South a compact, united people, made up of two races, closely connected by their social necessities us well as by their social traditions. The violent abolition of slavery by the Federal Government broke with a flow the thread of the social traditions which conneeted these two races. It did not break, nor in the nature of things could it break, the social mecessities which connected them. So far as we have any authentle grounds on which to form an opinion about the matter, the reciprocal feeling of the two rares at the South to each other at that time was as friendly as reason and experience combine to sho that In such elrenmstances it would "Ah," said the reporter, "that's too be likely to be. In that famous partition of the turkey and the erow between the Indian and the hunter, it is clear that the Indian would have preferred half a turkey with half a crow to the whole erow which he got. But in the hunter appropriated the turkey, there we nothing left for the Indian but the crow. The Southern white people have to live Is as essential to their prosperity as to the well-heling of the negroes. But It is esmutial both to the whitee and to the ne groes that the profits of the capital and labor of the whole community should not be left at the merey of a mole of legislative Idockheads controlled by a gang of legislative regues. And as these blockheads and these regues are in power by the force of the "black man's party," how are they to be just out of power ex-cept by a "width man's party?". It is not a question of races. It is a simple aim in arithmetle, Politics at the South is not n game of dominoes where all the pieces are white. It is a game of checkers where half the piece-are black. The Radical thieves have monopolized the black places. What can the conservative, honest men do but play the white !- N

Practical Ballooning.

We see that some man in California is ments in ballocadne which are of a same what novel character. He will use a him from the ground and sail away with him. He uses his balloon to reduce his bring into use artificial canvase wings, resembling a pair of parachittes, and working up and down on a wooden rod. Thus, he will lift himself into the air and suil about at will. This California ballocalist has hit upon a plan of navigating the air very similar to one which has long been cherished by a San Franplace man. The plan of our Washoo structed, which, when luflated, will barely suffice to lift him from the ground. This he will fasten to his body by mean of straps passing about his shoulders then will rievate blusself by using a pain of wings, of the pelicun or some other large bird. As the balloou will have reduced his weight to a pound or two, he is confident that he can make his wings carry him about in the air as well wingsenrry a bird weighing ten or twelve paunds. He is quite sure that he will be able to fly about in almost any direction lu culiu weather, after he has had a little practice in the handling of his wings. He says this blea is not altogether originol, as, about twenty years ago, a man Dut the Radical lenders at the North created quite a sensation in Paris by oon perceived that if they were to pre-incaus of a small bulloon which reduced serve the control of the Federal Clovern-ment against the perils of any change in Jully inflated.
